Lorenz, observed his adversary, displaying his ignorance of less majesty.

Anguish, pale and very much concerned, dragged him away, the prince saying the café ahead of them, followed by his chattering, cursing companions. Prince Gabriel was standing near the door as they passed out. He looked at the Americans sharply, and Anguish detected something like triumphant joy in his eyes.

"Good Lord, Lorry, this means a duel! Don't you know that?" cried he as they started upstairs.

"Of course I do, and I'm going to kill that villain too!" exclaimed Lorry loud enough to be heard from one end of the room to the other.

"This is horrible, horrible! Let me square it up some way if I began the alarm Anguish."

"Square it up! Look here, Harry Anguish, I am the one who will do the squaring. If he wants a duel, he can have it at any time and in any style he desires."

"He may kill you!"

"Not while a just God rules over our destinies. I'll give my chances with pistols, and now let me tell you one thing, my boy: He'll never live to touch his lips to hers, nor will there be a royal wedding. She cannot marry a dead man." He was beside himself with excitement, and it was fully half an hour before Anguish could bring him to a sensible discussion of the affair. Gradually he became cool, and the fever once gone, he did not lose his head again.

"Choose pistols at ten paces and at 8 tomorrow," he said nonchalantly, as a tap at the door of their apartment announced the arrival of the prince's faithful servant.

Anguish admitted two well dressed, black bearded men, both of whom had sat at the prince's table in the café. They introduced themselves as the Duke of Mirox and Colonel Attobawn. Their visit was brief, formal and conclusive.

"We understand that you are persons of rank in your own America," said the Duke of Mirox after a few moments.

"We are sons of business men," responded Mr. Anguish.

"Oh, well, I hardly know. But his highness is very willing to waive his rank and to grant you a meeting."

"I'm delighted by his highness' condescension, which I perfectly understand," observed Mr. Anguish. "Now, what have we to settle, gentlemen?"

"The detail of weapons."

"When Anguish announced that his principal chose pistols, a strange gleam came into the eyes of the Aphelians, and they seemed satisfied. Colonel Attobawn acted as interpreter during this short but very important interview, which was carried on in the Aphelian language. Lorry sat on the window sill steadfastly gazing into the night. The visitors departed soon, and it was understood that Prince Lorenz would condescend to meet Mr. Lorry at 8 o'clock on the next morning in the valley beyond the castle, two miles from town. There was no law prohibiting duels in Graustark.

"Well, you're in for it, old man," said Anguish gloomily, his chin in his hands as he fastened melancholy eyes upon his friend.

"Don't worry about me, Harry. There's only one way for this thing to go."

"What's that?"

"You dare to drink that toast!"

end. His royal highness is doomed." Lorry spoke with the earnestness and conviction of one who is permitted to see into the future.

"What is it?" he asked, writing some letters, not to say farewell, but to explain to certain persons the cause of the duel and to say that he gloried in the duel. But it was not until after midnight that the duelist sealed the envelopes, directed them and knuckled at his second's door to say: "I shall introduce my letters to you, Harry. You must see that they start on their way tomorrow."

Then he went to bed and to sleep.

At 6 o'clock his second, who had slept but little, called him. They dressed hurriedly and prepared for the ride to the valley. Their own new English bulldog revolvers were to serve as weapons in the coming combat, and a carriage was to be in waiting for them in a side street at 7 o'clock.

Before leaving their room they heard evidences of commotion in the hotel and were apprehensive lest the inmates had learned of the duel and were making ready to follow the fighters to the appointed spot. There was a confusion of voices, the sound of rushing feet, the banging of doors, the noise increasing as the two men stepped into the open hall. They were amazed to see half dressed men and women standing or running about the halls, intense excitement in their faces and in their actions. White uniformed policemen were flocking into the court doors. Soldiers, costless and listless, fresh from their beds, came dashing upon the scene. There were excited angry shouts and more noisy throngs than all, horrified looks and whispers.

"What has happened?" asked Lorry, stopping near the door.

"It can't be a fire. Look! The door to that room down there seems to be the center of attraction. Hold on! Don't go over there, Lorry. There may be something to unnerve you, and that must not happen now. Let us go down this stairway. It leads to a side entrance, I think." They were half way down the stairs when the thunder of rushing feet in the hall above came to their ears, causing them to hesitate between curiosity and good judgment.

"They are coming this way."

"Hear them how! What the devil can be the cause of all this rumup?" cried the other.

At that instant a half dozen police guards appeared at the head of the stairs. Upon seeing the Americans they stopped and turned as if to oppose a foe approaching from the opposite direction. Baron Dangloss separated himself from the white coats above and called to the men below. In alarm they started for the street door. He was with them in an instant, his usually red face changing from white to purple, his anxious eyes darting first toward the group above and then toward the bewildered Americans.

"What's the matter?" demanded Lorry.

"There! See!" cried Dangloss, and even as he spoke a conflict began at the head of the stairs, the police, augmented by a few soldiers, struggling against a howling, enraged mass of Aphelians. Dangloss dragged his reluctant charges through a small door, and they found themselves in the baggage room of the hotel. Despite their queries he offered no explanation, but rushed them along, passing out of the opposite door, down a short stairway and into a side street. A half dozen police guards were awaiting them, and before they could catch the faintest idea of what it all meant they were running with the officers through an alley as if pursued by demons.

"Now, what in thunder does this mean?" panted Lorry, attempting to slacken the pace, and Anguish were just beginning to regain their senses.

"Do not stop! Do not stop!" wheezed Dangloss. "You must get to a place of safety. We cannot prevent something dreadful happening if you are caught."

"If we are caught," cried Anguish. "Why, what have we done?"

"Unhand me, Baron Dangloss. This is an outrage," shouted Lorry.

"For heaven's sake, be calm! We are befriending you. When we reach the tower, where you will be safe, I shall explain," gasped the panting chief of police. A few moments later they were inside the prison gates, angry, impatient, fatigued.

"Is this a plot to prevent the duel?" demanded Lorry, turning upon the chief, who had dropped limply into a chair and was mopping his brow. When he could find his breath enough to answer, Dangloss said, and he might as well have thrown a bombshell at their feet.

"There'll be no duel. Prince Lorenz is dead!"

"Dead?" gasped the others.

"Dead?" dead in his bed, stabbed to the heart," explained the chief. "We have saved you from his friends, gentlemen, but I must say that you are still in a tight place."

If they related to them the whole story. Just before 6 o'clock Mirox had gone to the prince's room to prepare him for the duel. The door was closed, but unlocked, as he found after repeated knockings. Lorenz was lying on the bed, undressed and covered with blood. The horrified duke made a hasty examination and found that he was dead. A dagger had been driven to his heart as he slept. The hotel was aroused, the police were called, and the excitement was at its highest pitch when the five friends came from their room a few minutes after 6.

"But what have we to do with this dreadful affair? Why are we mixed up here like criminals?" asked Lorry, a feeling of cruel gladness growing out of the knowledge that Lorenz was dead and that the princess was freed from her compact.

"My friend," said Dangloss slowly, "you are accused of the murder."

Lorry was too much stunned to be angry, too weak to protest. For some moments after the blow fell and Anguish were speechless. Then came the protestations, the rage and threats, through all of which Dangloss sat calmly. Finally he sought to quiet them, partially succeeding.

"Mr. Lorry, the evidence is very strong against you, but you shall not be unjustly treated. You are not a prisoner as yet. In Graustark a man who is accused of murder and who was not seen by any one to commit the crime cannot be legally arrested until an accuser shall, before the princess, who is also high priestess, and swear on his life that he knows the guilty man. The man who so accused accuses to forfeit his own life in case the other is proved innocent. If you are to be charged with the murder of the prince, some one must go before the priestess and take oath—his life against yours. I am holding you here, sir, because it is the only place in which you are safe. Lorenz's friends would have torn you to pieces had we not found you first. You are not prisoners, and you may depart if you think it wise."

"But how can they accuse me? I knew nothing of the murder until I reached this place," cried Lorry, stopping short in his restless walk before the little baron.

"So you say, but—"

"If you accuse me, I'll kill you!" whispered Lorry, holding himself tense. Anguish could not hold him.

"Be calm, sir," cautioned Dangloss. "I may have my views, but I am not willing to take oath before her royal highness. Listen! You were heard to say you would kill him. You began the fight. You were the aggressor, and he is no one else on earth. It is said, who could have lied to murder him. The man who did the stabbing entered the room through the hall door and left by the same. There are drops of blood in the carpet, leading direct to your door. On your knob are the prints of bloody fingers whose— or some one else—placed his hand in turning the key. It was this discovery, made by me and my men, that fully convinced the enraged friends of the dead prince that you were guilty. When we opened the door, you were gone. Then came the search, the flight at the head of the stairs and the race to the prison. The reason I saved you from that mob should be plain to you. I love my princess, and I do not forget that you risked your life, each of you, to protect her. I have done all that I can, gentlemen, to protect you in return. It means death to you if you fall into the hands of his followers just now. A few hours will cool them off to doubt, but now—now it would be madness to face them. I know not what they have done to my men at the hotel—perhaps butchered them."

There was anxiety in Dangloss' voice, and there was honesty in his keen old eyes. His charges now saw the situation clearly and apologized warmly for the words they had uttered under the pressure of somewhat extenuating circumstances. They expressed a willingness to remain in the prison until the excitement abated or until some one swore his life against the supposed murderer. They were virtually prisoners, and they knew it well. Furthermore, they did not see that Baron Dangloss believed Lorry guilty of the murder. Protestations of innocence had been politely received and politely disregarded.

"Do you expect one of his friends to take the oath?" asked Lorry.

"Yes; it is sure to come."

"But you will not do so yourself?"

"No."

"I thank you, captain, for I see that you believe me guilty."

"I do not say you are guilty, remember, but I will say that if you did murder Prince Lorenz you have made the people of Graustark rejoice from the bottoms of their hearts, and you will be exulted from one end of the land to the other."

"Hanged and eulogized," said Lorry grimly.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, they cannot reach disseminated portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional means.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is

ON THE HUSTLE

Is the Queen City of the Pennyrile Owensboro will Demonstrate what She Can do with a Big Attraction Like the State Fair

The enterprising business men of Owensboro have carried their plans far enough along to make it clear that the State Fair during the week of September 21st is going to be a greater success even than was experienced last year in Louisville. They are already showing that when Owensboro bids for a big attraction, success is assured the enterprise, it matters not what the nature of it may be.
This, at least, is the opinion of the Directors of the State Fair, who found a far-seeing, determined set of business men at Owensboro ready to take hold of every suggestion and carry it to a successful conclusion.
The following local committee have been placed in charge there:
Advisory Committee—Dr. J. G. Hickman, C. W. Bransford, Lee Ray. Entertainment Committee—W. G. Archer, J. W. McCulloch, L. S. Frederick.
During August about 25,000 handsome State Fair posters will be hung, most of them of course in Western Kentucky counties.
Secretary L. B. Shropshire at the headquarters in the Board of Trade Building, Louisville, is daily receiving scores of letters from the biggest live stock men in this State and in the United States announcing their intention to complete for the $50,000 cash prizes that will be distributed. Several new big amusement attractions will be announced in a week or two.

Rural Free Delivery in Hancock.

Hancock county expects to get rural free delivery service next fall. The route will go down the river road from Hawesville to Pettie, although the office will not be discontinued because it is a rail road office; thence out to Pettie, across to Martindale and Pettie and back to Hawesville again. The offices at Martindale and Pettie will of course be discontinued.

The service pays the carrier fifty dollars a month, but he must furnish a regulation wagon and a horse and go every day except Sunday. D. G. Duncan, of Hawesville, was the only applicant who was examined.

A Physician Healed.

Dr. Geo. Ewing, a practicing physician of Smiths Grove Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I had been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced to use Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles I was entirely relieved and cured. I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles. I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success." A. R. Fisher.

PERFECT TRIP

Grand Army Headquarters Train to the Reunion at San Francisco.

Louisville, Ky., July 25, 1903.—All arrangements have now been completed by W. G. Force, Commander Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Kentucky, for the most elaborate trip ever planned for the Kentucky Veterans and their friends at the 37th National Encampment, which will be held at San Francisco, August 17-24, 1903.

Through Pullman tourist sleepers will be operated from Louisville, over the lines selected as the Official Route on the evening train of August 25, leaving Union Depot at 8:35 p. m. via the popular Henderson Road to St. Louis, the Missouri Pacific R'y to Pueblo, the scenic Rio Grande Lines to Ogden and the Southern Pacific R'y to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Arrangement have been made permitting those that go with the Headquarters train, to spend one day in Denver, one day in Colorado Springs, one day in Salt Lake City, and the schedule is so prepared as to permit a daylight ride through the Rocky Mountains. When Denver is reached the "Seeing Denver" car will take the party through all of the principal streets and sight of all points of interest in this wonderful city. After supper the summer gardens, parks and other places of high amusement can be visited, and sleepers will be located convenient to the depot, where they can be occupied for the night.

The day and evening at Colorado Springs can be spent in sight-seeing. The principal points of interest at this place, among which are Pikes Peak, Manitou, Grand Cavern, Garden of the Gods, Rainbow Falls, Cave of the Winds, Ute Pass and the "Cog Road," simply repay those taking the trip and are a revelation to those who have only read of these natural wonders. They must be seen to realize their wonderful beauty and magnitudes.

After leaving Colorado Springs the convenient schedule allows a daylight ride to Glenwood Springs through the "Heart of the Rockies."

One feature of this daylight ride through the mountains, that awes the beholders, and one that will ever be remembered, is the Royal Gorge, that awful testimony of nature's force, the walls of which rise perpendicularly for over half a mile from the river bed. The train will run very slowly through this gorge so that a good view of the entire eight miles may be secured. Salt Lake City, where a day will be spent, is one of the most remarkable places in the world. Here the Mormons erected a tabernacle with a seating capacity of 9,000 persons, also the grand Temple costing $4,000,000. Fourteen miles away is the great Salt Lake, the Great Salt Lake, the largest body of water in America. This great mysterious inland sea has an area of 3,500 square miles and is 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. Thousands go there annually to bathe in its waters. The day spent at this place will be one long remembered and never regretted.

The travel from Salt Lake City is through the States of Nevada and sunny California, San Francisco being reached in the morning of August 16th.

CLEANING

House is one of the duties that a weak woman looks forward to with dread. As a rule, she knows that she must pay for the over-strain with days or weeks of womanly suffering.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It cures the womanly diseases which undermine the general health. It establishes regularity, drives weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"I took two bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and I feel like a new woman. I was the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and am feeling like a new woman. I had been suffering for years with the same trouble. After taking your medicine I was cured. You can publish this or use it in any way you think best, as I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Pierce and his medicine."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Of San Francisco, no words are sufficient in description, nor will our space allow of more than a mere mention of a few of the delights of this wonderful and cosmopolitan city. It has hotels of every description and restaurants of world-wide fame—French, Italian, American and Oriental—with prices as various as their characteristics. The Cliff House is worth a visit, not only for the view, but for the excellent food. The Seal Rocks and occasional visits of vagrant whales, but for the excellent beach as well, though for bathing the luxurious Sausalito is perhaps more attractive. Among numerous other attractions may be noted Chinatown, the Army Post at the Presidio, the United States Mint, the Hopkins Museum of Art, while near by are numerous and delightful resorts, including the seaside city of Santa Cruz, the fruit orchards of San Jose, the garden city of the West, Mr. Hamilton, where is located the wonderful Lick Observatory, and Mt. Tamalpais, from which may be seen, spread at one's very feet, the panorama of the Golden Gate.

There will undoubtedly be a great many people outside of the G. A. R. who will be glad to avail themselves of this through tourist car service and the very cheap railroad and sleeping rates announced.

Taken with Cramps.

Wm. Kirmse, a member of the bridge gang working near Littleport was taken suddenly ill Thursday night with cramps and a kind of cholera.

His case was so severe that he had to have the members of the crew wait upon him and Mr. Gifford was called and consulted. He told them he had a medicine in the form of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he thought would help him out and accordingly several doses were administered with the result that the fellow was able to be around next day. The incident speaks quite highly of Mr. Gifford's medicine—Elder, Iowa, Argus.
